Candour 1953 - 2024 and beyond...

Editorial: Colin Todd

I will keep this Editorial short because I want this issue of Candour to be available at the Brit Dems AGM on 2 November and I am cutting it very fine indeed.

I shall not be there but wish you all well and a successful meeting. While you are meeting I shall be working on the worldwide mailout of this issue.

Real progress is finally being made on Stephen Smith's first book East London Rights for Whites 1990 - 94. The awful delay is entirely down to myself and I have now enlisted the help of a good friend of Candour who has eagerly taken up the challenge to knock the project into shape. Thinking Spring 2025 for publication. More news as we have it.

A reorganisation of how Candour is produced is in the works with the intention of increasing the frequency of the appearance of issues.

As part of that we need two new laptops. An appeal for those when I have worked out the financial outlay will appear in the next issue #888. (A loyal and generous US subscriber has already indicated he will pay for one laptop. Please send now what you can toward the second).

It is a terrible tragedy that so many misled and viciously mis-judged white working class men and women will be in prison this Christmas as a result of the actions of agent provocateurs, the state assets posing as nationalists and the keyboard clowns. If ever something raised the desperate need for true nationalist education this is it.

Even as I put this column to bed the news is that the immigrant second generation Rwandan alleged to have carried out the Southport atrocities is also to be charged with terrorist offences. Quelle surprise!

As we head rapidly towards 2025 (!) let us think positively and remember the words of Damh the Bard in his song which you can view at: Damh the Bard at fracking protest

*"...And all are ready to spoil your game,
For the blood of an outlaw it flows in our veins!*

*If you thought that we would do nothing
You've misunderstood!
For we are the sons and daughters of Robin Hood!"*

Published 31 July 2024

In the aftermath of a mass stabbing in Southport, UK, misinformation about the identity of the attacker, who is a minor and therefore cannot be named until criminal prosecution is complete, spread quickly across social media. The following evening, a community-organised vigil for the victims was hijacked by far-right rioting, mobilised through anti-Muslim and anti-migrant narratives with no factual basis. This dispatch explores the events that unfolded, the spread of hateful speech on- and offline, and the part played by platforms' business models, algorithms and content moderation.

On Monday, 29 July, a stabbing attack at a Taylor Swift-themed children's dance party in Southport, Merseyside, killed three young girls at the time of writing and injured several more. The tragedy, one of the UK's most significant mass-casualty events in recent history, is alleged to have been perpetrated by a local 17-year-old boy, whose motive is as yet unknown.

Self-described 'news' accounts rapidly spread falsehoods around the perpetrator. One viral narrative falsely named him as "Ali al-Shakati", a Muslim migrant new to the UK. This was later debunked by the police. Nonetheless, false claims surrounding the attack quickly garnered millions of views online, galvanised by anti-Muslim and anti-migrant activists and promoted by platforms' recommender systems. Far-right networks – a mix of formal groups and a broader ecosystem of individual actors – used this spike in activity to mobilise online, organising anti-Muslim protests outside the local mosque which later turned violent. Merseyside police have claimed that the English Defence League were responsible for the organisation of these protests, though EDL supporters were certainly not the only individuals present.

This Dispatch outlines the stark and rapid pipeline from online 'misinformation clickbait' to offline violence."

Or from the ludicrously misnamed BBC Verify propaganda outfit on 25 October (more on BBC Verify at the end of column 3, page 15):

"How did one single social media post, taken down within hours for being false, still end up being viewed millions of times and presented as credible evidence about the Southport attack?"

The fatal stabbings at a childrens dance class on 29 July sparked riots sparked riots in England and Northern Ireland.. Unrest was fuelled by misinformation on social media that the suspect was an illegal migrant."

(Note the deliberate misuse of the 'migrant word yet again)

* "Beyond someone's ken" is an idiom that means something is not within the range of what someone knows or understands.

The Corrupt Politicians All Loathe Yet Fear the White Underclass They Helped Create

Blair's Glove Puppet: "Two Tier Kier"

Starmer will forever be remembered for grovelling

*"He rose without a trace".
The phrase certainly fits the bland character who is now Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

Not that that makes him any the less dangerous

Embedded within Starmer's government are, advisors from The Tony Blair Institute and lurking with many others in the background are Peter Mandelson, Gordon Brown and the Miliband gruesome two-some, Ed and David. All of these failed politicians are now the 'elder statesmen'!

Starmer is a career lawyer, barrister and politician, one of many such clogging the British House of Commons and named, it seems, Keir after Keir Hardie (1856 -1915) a founder of the Labour Party in what now looks to be parody.

Hardie began work at the age of seven and was working in the Lanarkshire coal mines at ten.

The Keir we are lumbered with already has his legacy and will forever be remembered as "TWO TIER KEIR". That label is due to his very differing reactions to rioting depending on who the rioters are.

Back in 2020 when BLM engaged in protests, destroying public and private property, terrorising the public and violently attacking a neutered police, Keir Starmer responded by getting down on his knee in full support of the BLM movement.

This year we have seen other ghastly riots revealing the true face of the failed multicultural experiment

Leeds. 18 July. Our delightful 'Romani' visitors exploded into violence, burning vehicles, and attacking police officers because they were supporting social services attempting to remove allegedly abused children from a family.

No significant reaction from Starmer.

Whitechapel. 19 July. The Asian 'community' exploded into violence and attacked police officers over political events in Bangladesh!

No significant reaction from Starmer.

Compare and contrast to the so-called Southport riots which ran from 30 July - 5 August.

The 'two tier justice theory' or 'conspiracy theory' as the MSM led by the vile BBC like to describe it is something we know is true. The police and courts show leniency towards ethnic 'minority' and left-wing or antifa protestors while cracking down harshly on their so-called 'right-wing counterparts.

"He rose without a trace"*

The phrase "He rose without a trace" – now commonly used – was coined by Kitty Muggeridge (wife of Malcolm) for the late David Frost. She chose her words precisely.

Peter Lynch:

Patriot Unjustly Jailed for 3 Years!
Died 19 October 2024 in Gaol

Englishman Peter Lynch (above) will forever be remembered for his courageous defiance in the brutal face of the NWO and his understanding of how corrupt every level of our Sceptred Isle has become.

Peter Lynch had been married for 36 years, had four adult children and three grandchildren. Mr Lynch had also recently been made unemployed. He had serious health problems including diabetes, thyroid issues, angina and had recently suffered a heart attack.

The protest Mr Lynch became involved with was some seven days after the original third world Southport crimes. He went to the Holiday Inn Express in Manvers, Rotherham, on 4 August with his homemade placard that has led to much sneering in the MSM even in articles by snobbish hacks pretending to be sympathetic to his plight.

The Telegraph, 21 October, Isabel Oakeshot wrote, "while much has been made of his strange placard, there is no crime in accusing politicians of corruption, or having wackadoo theories about the world. Moreover, unlike many of the hardened criminals currently being released to free up prison places, this man has no track record of causing trouble, still less a string of previous convictions for serious offences."

Peter Lynch pled guilty (as did many others under immense pressure, false promises of lenient punishment and utterly inadequate legal representation) to violent disorder. He must have been stunned when Judge Jeremy Richardson KC sentenced him to two years and eight months in prison.

Peter Lynch had been at an angry demonstration outside a Holiday Inn and had shouted at police officers. Yes, shouted. He did not physically harm anyone; nor set anything alight; nor cause any criminal damage.

Look at his placard again. "ALL CORRUPT, PM's, MP's, POLICE CHIEFS, T.V. MEDIA, JUDICIARY, JUDGES, DEEP STATE... REPORTERS, etc."

Amen to that Peter Lynch...

Traitor's Gate Part One Margaret Thatcher - The False Boudicca

By Stephen Smith

Above: Thatcher in her 'Vote Yes' Europhile pullover for the 1975 Referendum on the then Common Market!

"I think we have gone through a period when too many children and people have been given to understand 'I have a problem, it is the government's job to cope with it!' - Or 'I have a problem, I will go and get a grant and cope with it!'. 'I am homeless, the government must house me!'. And so, they are casting their problems on society and who is society? There is no such thing! There are individual men and women and there are families and no government can do anything except through people and people look to themselves first".

Margaret Thatcher P. M.
Interview for Women's Own magazine. 1987.

No Such thing as Society (Or Nation?)

According to the MSM, 'Right-Wing' reactionaries and a large part of the political spectrum - Margaret Thatcher was one of our greatest Prime Ministers and a real patriot. Reality: Thatcher wasn't even a Conservative; she was in effective terms a socio-economic liberal. Patriot? Her economic policies promoted and reinforced internationalism. And yet she genuinely thought she made Britain great again. She was completely unaware that on the fundamental issues of race/immigration, sovereignty, law 'n' order and the need for a national economy that

The Traitor's Gate - Tower of London

The water-gate under St Thomas's Tower has been known for over 400 years as Traitors' Gate because of the number of prisoners, accused of treason, who have passed through it. Unfortunate and important state prisoners were committed to the Tower of London through the River Thames entrance. The journey of these prisoners was made by barge which would take them past London Bridge where the heads of recently executed traitors were displayed on the roof of the stone gate house having been placed on spikes and attached to poles.

The river archway entry (below) was bricked up in the mid-19th century because the embankment works narrowed the river causing it to run deeper, making the entrance to the gate (above) of little practical use for would-be visitors - traitorous or not - at most phases of the tide.

serves the people, not the notion of 'growth' - she was an abject failure!

In numerous mental asylums of the western world there are tragic individuals suffering from schizophrenia. The principle symptom of this terrible malady is a sense of unreality, not actually comprehending what the world around them is actually like. Some asylums contain individuals who often directly identify with a historical personality. Could be Julius Caesar, Napoleon, Elizabeth I (of England), even Christ. Margaret Thatcher was imbued with her own peculiar brand of political schizophrenia - she thought she was the living embodiment of Britannia... or Boudicca.

The lengthy quotation at the start of this article exemplifies her perverted ideological philosophy. The nation state, ethnic community, the Good Samaritan - none of these existed in Thatcher's world, only the atomised individual and their immediate relatives in a world of global human atoms - race and nation are redundant. The god of profit, the international market and laissez-faire are supreme.

"Few people have the imagination for reality" ~ Goethe.

Brief Biography

Sometimes when perusing the biography of an Establishment politician of significance, small clues indicate their eventual political direction. As well of course of those in the shadows who wield power but avoid publicity.

Margaret Hilda Thatcher (nee Roberts, was born in Grantham, Lincolnshire 13th October 1925. Middle-class family. Father was a shop keeper, Methodist and local political figure. She was described at school as intelligent and hard working. Studied chemistry at Oxford and spent a period as a research chemist and later as a barrister.

Became President of Oxford University's Conservative Association in 1946 and apparently around this time read Hayek's book *Road to Serfdom and she said she was subsequently influenced by its contents.

Married Denis Thatcher, a wealthy businessman, December 1951. Two children. Stood as Conservative candidate in Dartford in the General Elections of 1950 and 1951. Failed to get elected on both occasions.

Eventually elected to the prosperous, cosmopolitan seat of Finchley in North London, possibly upon the advice of Victor Rothschild (later Lord), who became an advisor to her for decades. Member of Parliament for the Finchley seat from 1959 - 1992. Minor role in Tory Government of Harold MacMillan.

During the 1960s was one of the few Conservative M.P.s to vote for the decriminalising of homosexuality and for David Steel's Abortion Bill. Both pieces of legislation approved by Parliament in 1967.

Also in 1967, Thatcher was invited by the United States' Embassy to take part in what can only be described as Globalist Instruction for aspiring politicians; The International Visitor Leadership Programme. There she met a range of characters from Paul Samuelson to Nelson Rockefeller. Interesting that, over the years, other UK politicians invited to Globalist summer camp included - former Premiers - Edward Heath, Tony Blair and Gordon Brown. Even Asian S.N.P. Leader Hamza Yousef got some training in internationalism!

Certainly, by the 1970s Thatcher was being influenced by neo-liberal economics. Membership of the Institute for Economic Affairs (I.E.A.) plus associations with Anthony Fisher, Ralph Harris and Arthur Seddon.

Thatcher was Education Secretary in Ted Heath's Tory Government (1970 - 74) and after Heath lost two General Elections in a row, she became party leader on the 11th February 1975.

Voice Training & Spin Doctors

Those advising Margaret Thatcher around this time, roughly mid-1970s, decided her voice lacked 'something'. At times her voice was shrill or possessed a nagging quality. Her first 'spin doctor', Gordon Reece, a former TV producer, started her on a course of voice training. He recommended she spoke lower and deeper. A coach was employed for this role. Her other principal advisors were two brothers who ran an advertising agency; the Saatchi brothers, of Iraqi - Jewish origin. It was their publicity skills that assisted her to win the 1979 General Election. Also employed by the Saatchi brothers was Tim Bell who was particularly useful to Thatcher during the Miners' Strike of 1984 - 85.

Thatcher became Prime Minister 4th May 1979, largely on the previous Labour Government's inability to handle the strife and strikes of the 'Winter of Discontent' plus her mischievous, ultimately deceitful offer to the British people to 'do something' about immigration.

Thatcher resigned as Prime Minister 28th November 1990 after being deposed as Conservative Party leader. After years of dementia Margaret Thatcher died after a stroke, 8th April 2013.

Political Heresy

THE biggest danger to an authentic Racial-Nationalist movement (and parties) is not Zionism, Liberalism or varying brands of Marxian Socialism. Opponents can be debated with and politically defeated at some point. The biggest danger is diversion. Taking the wrong road!

Following a false prophet offering fake Nationalism and because of their political eminence, people believe them, vote for them and tragically reject the real Nationalists who will genuinely help them and fight their cause! Thatcher and Churchill are two British examples. Eisenhower an American one; 'Plastic Patriots' who in reality will give you the political objectives you don't want!

A feature in the UK magazine The Spectator (29th October 2014) noted this succinctly, with an article by Fraser Nelson; "How Maggie's 'swamped' comment crushed the National Front". Tragically true, in the May 1979 UK General Election, the original NF put up 303 candidates. An astonishing achievement for a minority party. Sadly, the only publicity the NF received was of the negative variety and equally bad (in large part due to Thatcher's intervention and the way it was reported) very poor votes and no deposits saved.

The NF was severely damaged. Factional splits followed as well as a loss of momentum for Racial Nationalism. Our voting potential never recovered until the 1990s.

Of course the Tories were primarily elected due to the Labour Government's ineptitude in dealing with Trade Union shop stewards' militancy and strikes during the 'Winter of Discontent'. But Thatcher's comment definitely secured more White Working-Class votes and badly wounded British Nationalism.

"If you set out to be liked, you would be prepared to compromise on anything at anytime, and you would achieve nothing!"

Margaret Thatcher

1978 'Swamping'

Undoubtedly, Thatcher's following comment secured her (potentially) millions of votes and stole support from the then fast-growing National Front!

"...and I think it means that people are really rather afraid that this country might be swamped by people of a different culture".

Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher.
Interview with World in Action TV programme January 1978

Now listen to her real thoughts a year earlier: "It is my hope that ALL our peoples [?], from wherever they come, will play a full part in our national renaissance. Our country needs all of us".

New Life -
Indian immigrants newspaper 18th March 1977

Also worth mentioning are small reports which appeared in The Guardian and London Evening Standard newspapers in 1978 while Thatcher was telling the British public how concerned she was about 'swamping'.

The Guardian, 23 January, reported: "The Conservatives are said to be closely considering a cut in the rate of entry... They are also carefully studying possible definitions of the term 'dependant' which could limit rights of entry...".

Please note the words in bold!

Evening Standard, 16 February, former Conservative Home Secretary, Lord Robert Carr (a liberal Tory), said with great joy: "*I am delighted that Mrs Thatcher has specifically promised not to remove the rights of UK passport holders. I was very alarmed by the headlines with which Mrs Thatcher's views were put over. But when I read the small print, I found myself assured".

Dear Reader, please again, note the words in bold!

Race and Immigration

Under Thatcher legal immigration was never under around 54,000 per annum which may seem a small figure compared to today's numbers but that means during her tenure as Premier over half a million entered the country. This does not take into account offspring.

As finding precise immigration statistics from the 1970s onwards is a frustrating/depressing task, with much deliberate obfuscation by the Civil Service, it is reasonable to say that as Britain's inner-cities changed during the 1980's, the bulk of the immigrants would have been non-Europeans!

During this essay I will consistently use the word IMMIGRANT. The creation by the MSM of the word migrant is a mischievous exercise in semantics. Migration, as a word conjures up images of birds peacefully moving from continent in the natural way of things. IMMIGRANT is the word that explains the brutal reality of 'Open Borders' and the long term problems it creates for natives and immigrants alike.

The Alternative Political Lens

White Nationalists with a revisionist historical perspective realised decades ago that Winston Churchill was not the patriotic 'icon' he was purported to be. Many on the 'left' of politics (coming from a different angle) also realise that he was a political obscenity responsible for an unimaginable amount of mass death and destruction in Europe and Asia. This is healthy. Nothing worse than fake heroes and false ideals.

Churchill's actions and errors lead directly to the deaths of countless soldiers and civilians... The subject, perhaps, of a future Candour article. (Ground we have covered before and will again. Ed). His 'victory' in 1945 took us to the world of today; the world of globalism and the creation of the modern monster of 'anti-racism'.

Even the genuine supreme greats of world history had flaws, made mistakes, cost lives. Even those with a noble cause. Churchill's cause was not noble, neither was that of a late 20th century British Prime Minister who was often compared to him.

Unfortunately, I realise with an increasing sense of horror, there are still those within the broad church of the Nationalist 'Right' who revere, often with a high degree of emotion, Margaret Thatcher, 'The Iron Lady', Prime Minister 1979-1990. Of course, if one takes a few soundbites, snippets and images from the 1980s, newspaper banner headlines - revolving around the following: Falklands Conflict, Miners Strike, Tory conference speeches - a certain political persona appears. Patriot, protector, radical, maybe even... A covert Nationalist!

Just for initial outrage, from the firm opinions of an authentic British Nationalist, I will list Maggie's 'triumphs' and then analyse and dissect them. In Part Two of this feature key actions of the Thatcher governments will be scrutinised. For now, I will briefly list them in synopsis.

Thatcher's Many 'Triumphs'

- The betrayal of White Rhodesia
- The British Nationality Act 1981 whereby at least 400 ethnically Falkland Island Britons were excluded from automatic British citizenship.
- 1980 Bristol Race Riot.
- Mass unemployment (which became a sub-culture and grim reality which persists).
- The deliberate deindustrialisation of Great Britain.
- Privatisation of already publicly owned natural monopolies/national resources.
- Beginning of the end for Public (Council) Housing (which had given the White British Working Class decent domestic homes for decades).
- 1981 Race Riots
- The unnecessary Falklands War (a controversial issue).
- Squandering of and the sales of British Oil and Gas.
- 1985 Race Riots.
- The draconian elements of the 1986 Public Order Act.
- Appeasement in Ulster (Northern Ireland).

- Concessions to the E.E.C (later European Community).

- Calculated erasure of the British Coal Industry and its communities and the vital national interest of retaining the physical skills (and jobs) of working-class men and boys intentionally allowed to wither and die, and, ultimately the disdain and contempt for the British Working-Class displayed by Thatcher and her nefarious cohorts!

What must also be mentioned is that a mere three weeks after becoming PM Thatcher's government let in at least 10,000 Vietnamese Boat People. Instantly given housing and money!

It took a few decades for some incisive political commentators to note what serious racial nationalists saw at the time. That is the serious damage done by this deranged woman which is with us now.

The Road to Serfdom* (1944) by the Austrian - British economist and philosopher Friedrich Hayek (1899 - 1992) is apparently a classic in political philosophy. It argues that government control of the economy ultimately leads to totalitarianism and the loss of individual freedom.

Part 2: In Candour #889 I will precisely define the Ten Major issues that defined Thatcher's Premiership and the extensive damage they did to our nation and the treason entwined with them.

Our Real Nationalist Boudicca's

of Empire Loyalists. Leslie was a daughter of Ben Greene, author of The British Constitution and the Corruption of Parliament (published by and available from Candour), and an 18b. internee in WWII. The LEL had as many women activists, if not more at times, as it had male.

They had courage and real class.

"And over the Rhodesian issue let us in particular guard against those deceivers in the ranks of 'Conservatism' who pose as friends of our kinfolk in Rhodesia and talk of the need to build bridges to them while at the same time kowtowing to the leftist principle of 'eventual majority rule'. When the doctrines of these swindlers are put under the microscope they become exposed as no better than those of the liberals, communists and open enemies of the whites in Africa. They merely propose to put off till tomorrow what the latter intend to do today. White Rhodesians and South Africans should be under no illusions; they should recognise that their only true friends in this country are those who are prepared to speak out openly in defence of their right to stay in power for all time and not just for the few more years of grace that our modern Tories would condescend to give them."

The Secret People

By G. K. Chesterton

Smile at us, pay us, pass us; but do not quite forget,
For we are the people of England, that never has spoken yet.
There is many a fat farmer that drinks less cheerfully,
There is many a free French peasant who is richer and sadder than we.
There are no folk in the whole world so helpless or so wise.
There is hunger in our bellies, there is laughter in our eyes;
You laugh at us and love us, both mugs and eyes are wet:
Only you do not know us. For we have not spoken yet.

The fine French kings came over in a flutter of flags and dames.
We liked their smiles and battles, but we never could say their names.
The blood ran red to Bosworth and the high French lords went down;
There was naught but a naked people under a naked crown.
And the eyes of the King's Servants turned terribly every way,
And the gold of the King's Servants rose higher every day.
They burnt the homes of the shaven men, that had been quaint and kind,
Till there was no bed in a monk's house, nor food that man could find.
The inns of God where no man paid, that were the wall of the weak,
The King's Servants ate them all. And still we did not speak.

And the face of the King's Servants grew greater than the King:
He tricked them, and they trapped him, and stood round him in a ring.
The new grave lords closed round him, that had eaten the abbey's fruits,
And the men of the new religion, with their Bibles in their boots,
We saw their shoulders moving, to menace or discuss,
And some were pure and some were vile; but none took heed of us.
We saw the King as they killed him, and his face was proud and pale;
And a few men talked of freedom, while England talked of ale.

A war that we understood not came over the world and woke Americans, Frenchmen, Irish; but we knew not the things they spoke.
They talked about rights and nature and peace and the people's reign:
And the squires, our masters, bade us fight; and never scorned us again.
Weak if we be for ever, could none condemn us then;
Men called us serfs and drudges; men knew that we were men.
In foam and flame at Trafalgar, on Albuera plains,
We did and died like lions, to keep ourselves in chains,
We lay in living ruins; firing and fearing not
The strange fierce face of the Frenchman who knew for what he fought,
And the man who seemed to be more than man we strained against and broke;
And we broke our own rights with him. And still we never spoke.

Our path of glory ended; we never heard guns again.
But the squire seemed struck in the saddle; he was foolish, as if in pain.
He leaned on a staggering lawyer, he clutched a cringing Jew,
He was stricken; it may be, after all, he was stricken at Waterloo.
Or perhaps the shades of the shaven men, whose spoil is in his house,
Come back in shining shapes at last to spoil his last carouse:
We only know the last sad squires ride slowly towards the sea,
And a new people takes the land: and still it is not we.

They have given us into the hands of the new unhappy lords,
 Lords without anger and honour, who dare not carry their swords.
 They fight by shuffling papers; they have bright dead alien eyes;
 They look at our labour and laughter as a tired man looks at flies.
 And the load of their loveless pity is worse than the ancient wrongs,
 Their doors are shut in the evenings; and they know no songs.

We hear men speaking for us of new laws strong and sweet,
 Yet is there no man speaketh as we speak in the street.
 It may be we shall rise the last as Frenchmen rose the first,
 Our wrath come after Russia's wrath and our wrath be the worst.
 It may be we are meant to mark with our riot and our rest
 God's scorn for all men governing. It may be beer is best.
 But we are the people of England; and we have not spoken yet.
 Smile at us, pay us, pass us. But do not quite forget.

"'Why do you trust me?' Said Montag. A man moved in the darkness. 'The look of you's enough. You haven't seen yourself in a mirror lately. Beyond that, the city has never cared so much about us to bother with an elaborate chase like this to find us. A few crackpots with verses in their heads can't touch them, and they know it and we know it; everyone knows it. So long as the vast population doesn't wander about quoting the Magna Charta and the Constitution, it's alright. The firemen were enough to check that, now and then. No, the cities don't bother us - and you look like hell.'

They moved along the bank of the river, going south. Montag tried to see the men's faces, the old faces he remembered from the firelight, lined and tired. He was looking for a brightness, a resolve, a triumph over tomorrow that hardly seemed to be there. Perhaps he had expected their faces to burn and glitter with the knowledge they carried, to glow as lanterns glow, with the light in them. But all the light had come from the camp fire, and these men had seemed no different from any others who had run a long race, searched a long search, seen good things destroyed, and now, very late, were gathering to wait for the end of the party and the blowing out of the lamps. They weren't at all certain that the things they carried in their heads might make every future dawn glow with a purer light, they were sure of nothing save that the books were on file behind their quiet eyes, the books were waiting, with their pages uncut, for the customers who might come in later years, some with clean and some with dirty fingers.

Montag squinted from one face to another as they walked. 'Don't judge a book by its cover', someone said. And they all laughed quietly, moving downstream."

The Beginnings

1914 - 18

Rudyard Kipling

It was not part of their blood,
 It came to them very late
 With long arrears to make good,
 When the English began to hate.

They were not easily moved,
 They were icy-willing to wait
 Till every count should be proved,
 Ere the English began to hate.

Their voices were even and low,
 Their eyes were level and straight.
 There was neither sign nor show
 When the English began to hate.

It was not preached to the crowd,
 It was not taught by the State.
 No man spoke it aloud,
 When the English began to hate.

It was not suddenly bred,
 It will not swiftly abate,
 Through the chill years ahead,
 When Time shall count from the date
 When the English began to hate.

Smartphones Make Us Stupid

By Harry Hopkins

Technology stealing our precious time and talents

Living through a computer screen is not living

THE ubiquitous smartphone is possibly the most dangerous technology ever invented. It has the potential to become the singular instrument of total control that will enslave us all.

It is a piece of technology that masquerades as a tool to make our lives easier and simpler, but behind this facade of convenience the undercurrent is much more sinister: the aim is to make us totally dependent on this technology for our very existence.

Many people are aware of the dangers inherent in the smartphone, and they know full well that the globalist elite who seek to herd us into a transhuman slave state are dependent on technology to achieve their aims [thus discounting any notion that they are supernatural or in league with spiritual forces that still somehow need the internet. Ed. The Light].

Many of us warn how social media and the use of smartphones are addictive. But what do we mean by addictive, and is it possible to become truly addicted to technology?

Prior to the 1950s it was thought that you could only become addicted to a substance, and addiction itself was thought of as a disease. Addicts therefore were seen as those hooked on heroin, alcohol, painkillers or other such forms of administered drug, whether legal or illegal.

An experiment conducted on rats in the 1950s by two scientists, Peter Milner and James Olds, found that behaviour of a certain type, which registered rewards in the brain, could surely prove just as addictive as any substance based cause.

This discovery was made by accident when electrodes inserted in the rats' brains began to measure the effect on the 'pleasure centre' which would cause the rats to repeat the same behaviours repeatedly to gain the desired 'highs'. In fact, so acute was the rats' behaviour that they would carry on with the actions until they became exhausted.

This experiment caused quite a stir. If rats could become addicted to particular behaviours which gave them pleasure, could the same be said of humans? Initially behavioural addictions were doubted, but they are now recognised by the scientific community as being real.

It would appear that so long as an action is rewarding, pleasurable and serves to ease psychological discomfort, the brain responds to it in the same way as it would to a substance, and therefore the addiction mechanism is the same.

Addiction is not now classified as a disease, but is more thought of as a learning disorder, where an individual associates certain actions with pleasurable relief. Overindulging in alcohol, injecting with narcotics or taking mood altering medication is similar to the hits one achieves when compulsively over-exercising, gambling, forever checking social media and constantly using a smartphone.

The evil few who are attempting to mould the world to their inhumane desires are certainly clever. If you want to get people to do as you wish without too much coercion and resistance, then what better way to do it than to get as many people as possible addicted to pleasure, to the very means by which you can control every aspect of their lives? This is why the most popular smartphone apps and social media sites are designed to trigger the pleasure centres of the brain. This is also why those who are at risk of underlying psychological issues are also at risk of developing full-blown addictions to these technologies.

Addiction to technology is a very real 'dumbing down' process. It undoubtedly deadens our brains. In the 1970s, a team of psychologists looked into whether or not it was the possession of inborn talents that manifested into excellence, or whether it was the application, over a long period, of determination and effort that improved performance in any given field.

The psychologist K. Anders Ericsson was satisfied that, in most cases, it was the latter. How is this relevant and what has it to do with smartphones? The answer is simple: most people have a talent somewhere lurking inside them. As Ralph Waldo Emerson said, "every man I meet is my superior in some way, and in that, I learn from him."

The problem with modern day life is that most people are trapped on the treadmill of wage slavery and cannot pursue their talents, if indeed they have even identified them yet.

Of course, it is in the interests of governments to keep everyone on the treadmill. The last thing they want is a nation of self-motivated individuals pursuing their own agendas to excel at what they are good at, when they can be harnessed to the plough of the state and contribute to the enrichment of the few.

By what means does the state dumb down individuals to prevent them from becoming successful in their own right? Radio, TV, the press, formalised education, entertainment and technology, with the most efficient branch of that being the smartphone.

Between the ages of 18 and 50, if we spend three hours a day on a smartphone, which is at the low end of average usage, we will have spent four years gazing into that small black mirror in our hand. Can you imagine what could have been achieved in that time if it had been put to better use for our self-development or to build something?

Can this be a wake-up call for us? If it can be recognised that this amount of time, in effect, causes us to give up our individual thoughts and be monitored in the process, we could instead be participating in activities which truly enhance our world. This would enable vast numbers of people to become far more satisfied with their lives and their achievements.

Smartphones make us stupid.

They prevent us from reaching our full potential by gobbling up our valuable time, and by allowing our thoughts to be captured by free flowing items of nothingness which do nothing to enrich our lives. In the process, they are the supreme control mechanism for the rulers who sit back and laugh at how so many have willingly fallen into their trap.

In the wise words of Friedrich Nietzsche: "In such a highly developed humanity as the present one, each man by nature has access to many talents. Everyone possesses inborn talent, but few possess the degree of acquired toughness, endurance and energy to actually become a talent; that is to say become what they are."

To defeat the evil that seeks to enslave us and become what we truly are, we need to dump the smartphone and reclaim the time for ourselves. It's time.

Time to reflect during Black History Month

OCTOBER is Black History Month. A whole month to celebrate black people and, of course, to remind ourselves of how The Windrush docked just in time to save us. Yet, for some reason, key factors around this event are never mentioned.

The ship's arrival in 1948 effectively triggered blue collar mass immigration and the official line is that the mostly West Indian men on board were wanted and needed to rebuild Britain following WW2.

Nathan also gave the ship's operators authority to increase her capacity and therefore profits. The Gleaner operatives and Nathan had personal connections.

Not only did the top tier of government not call for the immigrants, but at this time our skilled young people were being encouraged to leave Britain through the Ten Pound Poms scheme. It's notable that Japan did not need to import foreign labour at this time.

Plymouth

2024

However, this was not the case and it is not true that the UK government, or the Home Office, wanted them to come. In fact Labour PM Clement Attlee was unaware of the arrangement until he received a telegram from the Jamaican acting governor. Who "regretfully informed" him that "an expected 450 men hoping to find work and with no particular skills and little more than a few pounds in their pockets are booked to come to the UK".

George Isaacs Minister for Labour was also taken by surprise and told MPs that, he did not know who sent them, that it was not an officially organised arrangement and that hopefully no encouragement will be given for others to follow.

A government memo called this event a political embarrassment and there were further concerns over trade union reactions. Interestingly, we as a people (especially trade unions) have never welcomed immigrants, despite what the liberals and political trade unions now say.

Without government knowledge the Windrush's New Zealand owners struck a private deal with a UK minister, Harry Louis Nathan (he soon after vacated his role in transport) for men to work in the UK. There was a family link between the owners and Nathan. An advertisement was then placed in the Jamaican paper the Daily Gleaner (founded by the brothers Joshua and Jacob De Cordova). Nathan also gave the ship's operators authority to increase her capacity and therefore profits. The Gleaner operatives and Nathan had personal connections.

Not only did the top tier of government not call for the immigrants, but at this time our skilled young people were being encouraged to leave Britain through the Ten Pound Poms scheme. It's notable that Japan did not need to import foreign labour at this time, despite in comparative terms losing more of their population.

Successful British Democrats Meeting South East London 15th September

On Sunday, 15th September, members of the British Democrats gathered at a charming venue on the South East London/Kent border.

Party Secretary Michael Jones chaired the meeting.

The first speaker was the talented Matt Godden, who delivered an incredibly well-researched speech based on the flaws of the *Macpherson Report and the dreadful ramifications of it.

The next speaker was former Mathematics Lecturer Adrian Romilly. Adrian delivered an engaging talk on the concept of Direct Democracy, which is similar to the Swiss model. Following his presentation, he fielded questions from the audience, sparking a lively debate.

Members enjoyed a light buffet, tea, coffee, and a good chat during the break. Our meetings are political gatherings and social events where members can connect and feel part of a community. Then, a raffle was drawn, and members in attendance donated several prizes.

Party Chairman Dr Jim Lewthwaite was the next speaker. He spoke on several topics, including the current historical context. He explained some opportunities and benefits of participating in parliamentary elections, citing raising the British Democrats' profile as an example.

Councillor Christopher Bateman was the next speaker. Cllr Bateman spoke about housing and the lack of infrastructure for the mass building projects being rolled out across the country, including in his own borough of Basildon, Essex.

The final speaker was National Elections Officer Lawrence Rustem, who encouraged members to step up by putting themselves forward as local election candidates. Lawrence also criticised the Net Zero migration policy of Reform UK. He advised everyone to watch the footage on the British Democrats' YouTube and Telegram channels of Nigel Farage explaining his 'One in, One out' policy, where he openly admits Reform would allow 600,000 migrants into the UK every single year. So much for being tough on immigration!

Michael Jones then paid tribute to our hardworking members, particularly Councillor Ken Perrin, Councillor Christopher Bateman, and National Elections Officer Lawrence Rustem, for their commitment to community-based politics and getting things done for local people. He also mentioned some of the sterling work Membership Secretary and Administration Officer, Peter Finch, does for the party. Peter being another key part of our team.

A raffle and a collection generated a significant amount of money for party funds. We deeply appreciate the exceptional and unwavering support of our members and supporters, whose contributions are integral to the success of our party.

"Stephen Lawrence was murdered on 22 April 1993 in an unprovoked racist knife attack in Eltham, South London. The Inquiry into his murder led by the late Sir William Macpherson uncovered major failings in the police investigation and in the way Stephen Lawrence's family and his friend Duwayne Brooks were treated. The report, published twenty-two years ago in February 1999, was truly ground-breaking, leading to major changes in the law, in policing, in the response to institutional racism and the treatment of racist crimes, and ultimately to two convictions for Stephen Lawrence's murder".

Police Union Rep Suspended For Telling the Truth

By Anonymous Police Officer

Rick Prior, the Chair of the *Metropolitan Police Federation, recently gave an interview to GB News highlighting the fact that some police officers are reluctant to engage with members of ethnic minorities because they could be labelled as being 'discriminatory'. Prior was then duly suspended by the Police Federation of England and Wales (PFEW) for being discriminatory.

As a serving officer, I can tell you that the fear of suspension, or worse, if an interaction 'goes wrong' is all pervading. Aside from the obvious physical dangers, we know there are many activists and keyboard warriors out there who are just waiting to take some phone footage out of context and put it online, along with their mischievous interpretation of events. Also (and this is far worse), we know that police senior management will hang an officer out to dry if it means extricating themselves from any blame, regardless of context. They can then point to a 'rogue officer' rather than address any failings at a strategic level – of which there are many.

The Territorial Support Group (TSG) officers who were wrongfully dismissed following a stop and search incident involving athlete Bianca Williams is a case in point. They were dismissed for gross misconduct after a disciplinary hearing ruled they had lied about the reason to search the occupants of the car she and her husband were traveling in. The car had blacked out windows and initially made off when indicated to stop by the officers, in an area which was plagued by gang-related violence. If that car hadn't have been stopped, the officers would not have been doing their job. But then they were sacked for it, and only reinstated by the Police Appeals Tribunal.

Rick Prior is a vocal supporter of these and other colleagues who are the victims of politically motivated misconduct procedures, and many colleagues are whispering that this could be one of the reasons for his suspension.

Also, Churchill, in his second term as Prime Minister acknowledged that mass immigration was being driven by factors such as the welfare state and not labour shortages and that quotas should be in place to prevent it.

Since the Windrush of course, immigration has increased year on year, resulting in overcrowding and the cultural and racial make up of England's cities becoming unrecognisable.

As an aside, the Windrush itself was used pre WW2 by Germany as a leisure cruiser for workers and was discouraged from docking in this country for fear it would cause discontent among British workers.

Yours faithfully,
John Ings

Mr Ings in his published letter references certain names.

Harry Louis Nathan (1889 - 1963), later 1st Baron Nathan, acted after WW I as honorary solicitor to the Zionist Organisation which promoted the 're-establishment' of Israel.

The Daily Gleaner was founded by Jacob Raphael de Cordova (1808 - 1868) who was born in Spanish Town (near Kingston), Jamaica to parents who were 'British Jews of Spanish descent'. His father was a coffee brewer and grower involved in the trans-Atlantic slave trade and who, according to the 1812 Jamaica Almanac owned 60 negroes.

All in all the Empire Windrush saga seems to be a very dirty business and not the wonderful new beginning we are fed constantly.

Dear Editor,

Many thanks for the latest issue of Candour. I especially liked the article The Men of Whitby by Robert Blatchford. Many years ago I remember seeing a painting of the famous rescue by the people of Whitby and the surrounding area dragging the lifeboat overland to Robin Hoods Bay to save the crew of the foundering ship. It was a marvellous feat in terrible weather and it would be wonderful to see our folk with such spirit again.

I had another charity shop find. An original 1908 copy of Blatchford's Britain for the British in which he explains his patriotic socialism. He wanted Britain to be self-sufficient in food production and for a fair deal for British workers against foreign competition financed by greedy international capitalism.

Now, 116 years later, we are still waiting for someone to take us in this direction and where no one interferes in other people's affairs. National freedom, the countryside and the family way of life are all targeted for destruction by the race mixing 'New World Order'. Robert Blatchford and the early pioneers would be aghast to see what has happened. From a Britain that mistreated its people during the industrial revolution, to a people suffering from obesity, drugs and degeneracy. Ugh!

It's Durham Gala next month but not sure if I will be going. The 'Gays Support the Miners' now get to play a part with their banners in the festival and it kills it for me. Next month is 'Pride in Gateshead'. We also have a 'Black History' month. At one time such events would get a day to celebrate but political correctness demands four weeks for such nonsense. 'Holocaust Day' is certainly getting its nose pushed out!

I'd rather have local council repairmen keeping our streets and parks tidy and getting housing repairs done.

All the Best,

Gordon Stridiron

Dear Editor,

Who decides what is misinformation and what isn't? Is it Marianne Spring who claims to be the BBC's first disinformation specialist? That's the same BBC that John Pilger claimed was the "most refined propaganda service in the world" and an "extension of the established order" (speaking to Afshin Rattansi, Going Underground).

A recent study, to take one example, looked at thousands of online articles and posts from the BBC between 7th October, 2023, the date of the Hamas attacks on Israel, and 2nd December, 2024, and found a "systematic disparity in how Palestinian and Israeli deaths are treated" (study by Dana Najjar and Jan Lietava).

Words such as murder, massacre, and slaughter were almost exclusively linked to Israeli deaths, as compared to the words killed and died which were more likely to be linked to the deaths of Palestinians. The media platform, OpenDemocracy, found similar results in their research. Yet the BBC has taken it upon themselves to spearhead the fight against misinformation.

In 1996 in an interview with Noam Chomsky, the BBC journalist, Andrew Marr, asked, "How can you know I'm self-censoring?" to which Chomsky replied, "I'm not saying you're self-censoring. I'm sure you believe everything you say. But what I'm saying is if you believed something different you wouldn't be sitting where you're sitting" (the BBC's Big Idea, 1996).

Presumably, if the BBC was less biased, more anti-establishment, and therefore not fit for purpose, the British Government would have to find another propaganda mouthpiece, and it would risk losing all non-licence fee financial support. Other funding sources include foreign governments, the United Nations and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

Birds of a feather.

Louis Shawcross

Editor: The BBC's brazen cheek in projecting themselves as the Truth Police, 'verifiers' of news, is truly astonishing. Fortunately an ever growing percentage of Britons do NOT believe much the BBC passes off as 'news' or 'fact'.

BBC Verify state on the BBC website:

"What claims do you want BBC Verify to investigate?"

Have you seen a claim made in an interview, speech or on social media that you want the Verify team to look into?"

Note that they 'investigate' the BBC output, and obviously the stream of Marxist liberal crap continues unabated, but they also presume to investigate the rest of us! The following is from their launch.

"We've brought together forensic journalists and expert talent from across the BBC, including our analysis editor Ros Atkins and disinformation correspondent Marianna Spring and their teams. In all, BBC Verify comprises about 60 journalists who will form a highly specialised operation with a range of forensic investigative skills and open source intelligence (Osint) capabilities at their fingertips".

The paedophile scandal ridden BBC, from its inexplicable decades long employment of the revolting Jimmy Savile, someone that every boy in the playground at my secondary school in the 1970s knew was a serious 'wrong 'un' and 'kiddie fiddler', has the brass neck to demand we continue to fund their Marxist degeneracy and anti-Briton nonsense through the legally enforced Licence Fee.

Most recently we have the conviction of paedophile Huw Edwards, the BBC's leading screen news presenter, their SENIOR journalist for a decade who recently fronted the late Queen's funeral broadcast!

The hugely remunerated (by those foolish enough to pay the BBC Licence) degenerate was sentenced to 6 months suspended for two years. Not a day in prison.

Compare that sentence to those being handed out to the misguided Britons, by today's heirs of Judge Jeffreys, who were misled and took to the streets in mistimed and agent provocateur led protest.

In the twelve years of its existence, the League of Empire Loyalists became almost a national institution.

Your 'Smart' Phone is SO CONVENIENT... for the enemy

I used the above Bob Moran cartoon in the Editorial page of issue #886. (Always worth repetition to reinforce a good point). Something in my bones was telling me then, before the faux peasants rebellion since, that trouble was in the wind.

Using the prophetic cartoon I was warning, and do again, that most people, from habit or more likely addiction, carry a so-called smart phone. Or, as I call it, a CONVICT YOURSELF KIT. The police just have to download the information contained in the apparatus and "Bob's your auntie" (it is 2024).

Off to a jail being emptied of multi-cultural 'enrichers' in the UK or as is now being hinted at presently a prison in Estonia. The MSM are blabbing that the German government now want to use Rwanda, to where NOT A SINGLE illegal immigrant was sent from the UK by the Tories, for their undesirables?

Confused? I think that is always the intention....

A Very Good Question.

What is the Dunning - Kruger Effect?

I have no idea of the provenance of the following piece recently received at the Candour office but we like it so much that it is worth repeating. Those to whom it applies will never understand that it is about them.

"The Dunning - Kruger effect is a cognitive bias where individuals with low ability tend to overestimate their competence, while those with high ability underestimate theirs. It was named by psychologists David Dunning and Justin Kruger, who described the effect in a 1999 study entitled Unskilled and Unaware of it: How Difficulties in Recognising One's Own Incompetence Lead to Inflated Self-Assessments.

Their experiments were inspired by McArthur Wheeler, who in 1995 robbed a bank in America in broad daylight. He was surprised to be arrested, as he firmly believed that covering his face in lemon juice would make him invisible to the CCTV cameras. Dunning and Kruger conducted a series of studies based not only on his incompetence but also his lack of awareness. They asked a number of participants to perform various tasks and then estimate how well they did.

Those who scored well tended to place their peers higher, and those who scored poorly rated their peers lower.

It appeared that skilled students who found the tasks easy assumed that everyone had better scores than they actually had; whereas unskilled students, who found the tests hard, assumed the opposite.

The Dunning-Kruger effect has entered popular culture, such as in talent shows, where the participants can't believe it when they suffer rejection."

The Dunning - Kruger Effect. Summation.

People with little ability in a given field erroneously believe they excel in it.

DONATIONS

Candour has always needed YOUR financial support well over and above subscriptions and sales. The Royal Mail were granted permission from October 7, just six months after the last cost hike, to hugely increase prices again. (A sure sign that it will be sold off soon to a dodgy alien businessman or consortium who donate generously to the parasitic parties and politicians).

The cost in the UK of posting a single copy of Candour to subscribers as a Second Class Large letter is hanging by a weight thread between £1.55 or £2.10!

Candour, as long as it exists, WILL ALWAYS remain in print.

It has been that way since our first issue in 1953. It is your donations, large and small, then and now, that have and will keep Candour going and growing.

Please make all Cheques or Postal Orders payable to Colin Todd or send cash in £'s Sterling, Euros, or US $'s to our postal address at: BM Candour, London, WC1N 3XX, UK. (If cash wrap in tin foil and send in a secure envelope).
